The Recent Bad Boy.

BY GEORGE W. PECK.

"Hello, where you been?" said the groceryman to the bad boy, as he came along with an old fashioned oil cloth carpet bag, with one handle gone. and a tired look on his carpet bag and the boy, as though they had just returned from a journey. "Haven't seen you in here for two weeks, and I began to think you had been abducted, or mysteriously disappeared.

You look sick." "O, I am not sick, but tired, and deepy, and hungry. I wish you would cut me off a cheese rind, or give me a herring skin, or anything," said the bad boy, as he dropped the carpet bag on the floor- and dropped nto a half bushel measure, and closed

A Prayer for the Federals.

Just before a battle, a confederate soldier discovered an old man kneeling by a log praying. "Oh, Lord," said the old man "have mercy on the federals this day-" "Get up from there," exclaimed the soldiers. "Got no better sense than to come around here praying for the d-d Yankees?"

The old man looked up and remested to be let alone. The soldier demanded that the prayer should be discontinued. Just then an officer called the soldier and said :

"Why in the thunder don't you let that man alone. Don't you know him?"
